1. Anti-American demonstrations at Tsinghua University indicate that Communist leadership among the students is very skillful. The actual instigators are generally unknown but are among the student body. Those who appear to be the instigators are simply fronts. Students are organized in cell systems and consequently apprehension of one, even though he should confess concerning his associates, does not implicate more than four or five.
2. There apparently are sufficient funds and equipment available to those in charge of conducting and arranging anti-American activities. When a demonstration is to take place American-made trucks appear in sufficient numbers to carry hundreds of students to demonstration points, and after the demonstration the trucks disappear. The printing of literature and posters is an additional considerable expense for which funds apparently are available.
3. The average student at the University feels no ill-will toward America or Americans.
